

Author Bio - D.P. O'Donnell (Glamour Boys).

D.P. O'Donnell is an author, educator, and speaker currently living in Lethbridge, Alberta. He was born in Toronto, educated in Toronto and New Haven, and has lived in Baton Rouge, York (UK), and Amsterdam. He is a Canadian citizen.

A researcher and teacher of historical language and literature by training, O'Donnell has written numerous academic books and articles, including a study of the first recorded poem in the English language, the Diary of Anne Frank and other Dutch war memoirs, and early law in what is now the Netherlands.

GLAMOUR BOYS is his first novel, but the work draws on his research and literary experience: it is rigorously researched and based on historical events recounted in contemporary Dutch and Canadian sources, but it is also engages playfully with the language and literature of the time, with events and even characters from Dutch and English pulps of the day making cameo appearances.

For more information about O'Donnell and his work, please visit his author site <https://dpodonnell.info> or his academic site <https://people.uleth.ca/~daniel.odonnell>. He can be reached on Twitter @danielPaulOD (1900 followers), by email (dan@dpodonnell.info or daniel.odonnell@uleth.ca), or by telephone at (403) 393-2539.

